A Letter to Dear Children: On Our Overpopulation-Violence Connection Russell J. Adams J.D.

In their 1992 Warning to Humanity, 1,700 of the world's best scientists, including half the Nobel Prize winners then living, spoke out against overpopulation-devastation of our children's futures. Since then, global per person food, water, and energy supplies have continued to fall.

Golden rules at the heart of many ancient religions cry out for men and women to conceive only those children they can adequately support, cry out for conception care. Yet population-aggressive values, rules that grow even religion businesses as fast as possible, often displace golden rules.

If we continue to be restrained by population-aggressive values from creating sustainable human civilization, then precious, core humanitarian/faith values will have meant nothing.

Today, the best of science and ancient faith are coming together today in an unprecedented and frightening agreement. What our generations do with golden-ruled wisdom will decide for growing billions whether life will be lived in Eden or Apocalypse.

A Letter to Dear Children is a guide to all who would revive ancient golden rules to save for our children what remains of Eden, what remains of blessings that living generations were born with.

Chapter three, "Freedom or Slavery, How Overpopulation Decides," explains the population cycle civilization model that causes slavery to reappear repeatedly throughout human history. Martin Luther King, Gandhi, and others have sacrificed much to grow freedoms. A Letter To Dear Children, building upon work by Harvard's Orlando Patterson, maps the way MLK's dreams can permanently be brought to life.

As babies worldwide are born faster than jobs, Western incomes decline (chapter ten). Anxiety spreads. So will us-versus-them discrimination, insecurity-based authority support (such as elected Hitler's National Socialists), together with hideous, communal urges to strike out against those seen as "others, outsiders," strangers in our midst.

Only the world's first, sustainable civilization is capable of eliminating such pressures. "Genocide's Roots in the Overpopulation Cycle," chapter two, applies this knowledge to end horrifying and brutal dynamics behind genocidal slaughter.

Mastery of our human overpopulation cycle opens doors to the grandest hope of all ages, of gliding past rocks of apocalypse toward that paradise which is sustainable Eden.

A Letter To Dear Children can help all who care. Living by truly golden-ruled, humanitarian paths will allow brothers and sisters around the world to enjoy the greatest of imaginable blessings. Sustainable civilization needs no longer be scarred by war, genocide, crime and famine. Golden-ruled population enlightenment will give our children their best possible future.
