A fine exposition on the life and times of Mr. Buckingham, with four primary sections: The Early Years - The Real Shootinest Gent'man - Conservation - Awards & Recognition. From the forward, written by Irma Buckingham O'Fallon: "Nash Buckingham was an author, an athlete, a conservationist, a scholar, and the most gentle man I've ever known. He was honored for his contributions to each and every field. He corresponded with "captains and kings," as they say, with statesmen, heads of state, chairmen of notable corporations, and presidents. He has been memorialized and eulogized. Nash Buckingham was my grandfather." The stories are pure Buckingham and are sure to strike the hearts of all those who have enjoyed his work across the years, and there are photographs from his personal collection. This is the summation of a life well-lived, and a message still to be heeded.
