When Megan Ducass set out for Australia's Outback, she had no idea it would lead her on a hunt for a killer! In the wake of her fiancé's deceit and its crushing humiliation comes the chance of a lifetime for Meg—a contract to film wildlife for a world famous magazine. Along the route from Melbourne to Darwin, Meg notices an ever-present black Nissan Patrol. Enter Buck Daniel, with his dangerously sexy and brooding sensuality. The grief-stricken Buck has only one thing on his mind, tracking down his wife's killer and avenging her death. Like a lone wolf, he's been stalking his quarry steadily northward, despite dead-ends and false information that have kept him just one step behind. Now, he has another lead and this time the trail he is about to take lies through a web of deadly intent. When Meg finds herself in need of a lift and asks him, he point blank refuses, unwilling to put her at risk. But when all is said and done, Buck can't bring himself to abandon the damsel in distress, and the couple begins to travel together. One night, under the cover of darkness, two men attack their campsite. Although Buck and Meg ward them off admirably, Meg is hurt. While Buck tends her, she senses the desire running through him, and the answering cry within herself. Consumed by passion, they surrender to one another. Happiness is fleeting, however, because Buck is torn between loyalty to the past and the feelings that Meg has ignited within him. Will Buck's history forever haunt him or will the smouldering desire and deep affection he sees in Meg's eyes bring him back to life and to love?
