Irritated by the fact that she now has to welcome her father's guest and yet knowing that he would have wanted her to be hospitable to a friend, Laura decides to hold back on the sale and entertain her father's guest for a few weeks instead.

From the first moment that Vincent Potter walked into her father's beach house, Laura couldn't resist him, while struggling against the grief she was already experiencing over the death of her father. Vincent is an older man, a successful novelist, a rich celebrity and she had no idea he was also her father's best friend. Laura has to not only deal with the grief of her loss, but also fight against the surprising emotions she now feels towards a man twice her age and completely out of her league. It won't be too long before her resolve cracks and she discovers how she truly feels and who Vincent Potter really is.
